Chief Holtzman spoke briefly about Mr. McNair. He stated that he got to know Mr. Jermaine McNair soon after he got to the Greenville Police Department. Mr. McNair helped him to get connected to the community so he could do his job better. He stated that Mr. McNair was a good friend with him and he was a good friend to the police department. He informed Mr. McNair that he appreciated his efforts and that he and the Greenville Police Dept. looked forwarded in working with him in the future.

Vice-Chair Timothy Webster asked the citizens to hold all of their questions and comments until the guest speaker had completed his presentation.

GUEST SPEAKER: Mr. Jermaine McNair

Mr. McNair thanked Chief Holtzman for his kind words. He stated that those words were important because being a community connector is building a platform for service and action in a community. But opening up the platform and sharing it with other organizations, leaders and other institutions so that they can possibly be more effective delivering services and resources to a community that sometimes fall out of touch between our institutions and our communities. He stated that can render all sorts of cultural divides and things of that nature. He stated that many of you the (citizens) who are in the room who are willing to stand in the gap and hold hands on both sides. He also stated that that is what the citizens had done tonight, stepped in into a gap for their organization, company, and institution and they would hold their hand of what this action process is going to be like and make this process more complete. Mr. McNair stated that before he could go further he must give a tear jerking congratulations and a humble thank you to all the citizens for being at the meeting.

Mr. McNair gave acknowledgment to some of the organizations who attended the meeting. They are as follows:

The Greenville Police Department, Chief Mark Holtzman
Dr. Krystal Chambers, leading professor at East Carolina University
Dr. Bob Edwards, East Carolina University Sociology Department
Mr. RJ Hemby, influence and connectivity from across the river and intercity Greenville

Mr. Ernest Lee - Director of Pitt Community College Outreach

Mr. McNair, the founder of Westgate Agreement stated "Our young people often have the keys to unlock some of the mysteries of what's really going on in a society where some of us, as adults, we may not be out there anymore."

Some people link the west side of Greenville with a lot of crime, but an outreach program and new initiative is looking for support from the community to touch the individuals who live there.

Mr. McNair is one of the initiative's leaders, an idea he said started two years ago at a Police community relations meeting that he hosted in the very same room. Now, that idea is becoming a reality. Mr. McNair stated that we're creating something where everybody can finally can step in and play a role in one process.

The initiative is focused on troubled areas in the community, mainly West Greenville. Mr. McNair stated that every two weeks, Greenville Police will send them names of individuals who've been arrested in, or around, West Greenville.

From there, Mr. McNair and his team (other organizations) will make contact and begin forming a relationship to serve as that person's mentor. During the process, Mr. McNair said they will be able to provide those they've been mentoring with resources offered in the community.

One group participating in the initiative is Pitt Community College.

“We’ll be able to provide resources and a network for students to come in, get engaged, and be a quality citizen for our community,” said Jasmine Spain, PCC’s Director of Student Conduct.

Others involved include East Carolina University, behavioral health specialists, and Vidant Health. Officials at Vidant said they heard of the initiative in January and wanted to join right away. “We believe it is important to be part of the community, and there are a lot of opportunities that we would love to be able to engage the community in that involve things like workforce development, training programs,” said John Marques, Vidant’s Chief HR Officer.

Mr. McNair stated that many of the organizations are already involved in mentoring. But are not sharing the platform with one another and the young people are suffering for it.

The idea is that by bringing everyone together to help those in need, the community can grow from the bottom up. It also streamlines the process to get resources to those having run-ins with the law.

Mr. McNair stated that if we could work with the kids to try to see the issues through their eyes, get a grasp of what they’re experiencing, they actually have the opportunity to not only do better in their life, but unlock some doors that we’ve all been trying to unlock.

Mr. McNair passed out information on the following.

The Westgate Project - Coalition Organizations

He stated five businesses are planning to launch or reopen and he will be partnering with them to employ individuals through the initiative.
