CITY SEAL, FLAG, AND LOGO

The Seal of the City of Greenville was developed by H.H. Duncan, City Clerk, along with Mrs. R.B. Starling and designer Mr. K.A. Conway. Their work began in 1952.

Two elements dominate the seal. The influence of the Bright-Leaf Tobacco industry on our city and Pitt County is represented by the hank of “Golden Leaf.” Equally prominent is the proud presence of East Carolina University, formerly East Carolina Teachers College. Since Greenville was established in 1774, this is the date used for the seal.

City Council approved the seal's design on April 11, 1957.

The City Flag was envisioned in 2006 by Council Member Larry Spell and designed by Public Information Officer Steve Hawley. It has a field of green to represent the city, a horizontal stripe of blue through the middle to represent the Tar River, and the City Seal in the middle.

City Council approved the flag's design on May 8, 2006.

The City's logo and tagline of Find yourself in good company were the result of the City's branding efforts. The logo has an abstract compass with the needle pointing North (a reference to North Carolina) with a capital G representing Greenville's position as the "capital of East Carolina." The compass represents a tool to help you find yourself, as in the tagline of Find yourself in good company. This reflects that when you find yourself in Greenville, you will find yourself among people, businesses, and opportunities that will make you feel welcome and right at home. You'll find this is a great place to live, work, and play in good company.

City Council approved the logo and tagline on October 10, 2013.

Find yourself in good company®

ABOUT OUR CITY

Greenville was founded in 1771 as “Martinsborough,” after the Royal Governor Josiah Martin. In 1774, the town was moved to its present location on the south bank of the Tar River, three miles west of its original site. In 1786, the name was changed to Greenesville in honor of General Nathanael Greene, the Revolutionary War hero, and later shortened to Greenville.

During Greenville’s early years, the Tar River was a navigable waterway, and by the 1860’s, there were several established riverboat lines transporting passengers and goods up and down the river. Cotton was the leading agricultural crop, and Greenville became a major cotton export center. Before the turn of the century, however, tobacco surpassed cotton and became the leading money crop. Greenville became one of the state’s leading tobacco marketing and warehouse centers.

For over a century, Greenville was recognized only for being an important tobacco market and the home of a small State-supported college. By the mid 1960’s, a new image began to evolve. The small college, East Carolina Teachers College, had become the third largest State-supported college, and enrollment approached 8,000 students - twice the 1960 enrollment figure. In 1967, it became East Carolina University. The ECU Medical School admitted its first four-year class in 1977. At the turn of this century, ECU’s enrollment topped 18,000. Current enrollment is nearly 29,000.

Greenville’s current economic development began in 1968 when Burroughs Wellcome, a major pharmaceutical research and manufacturing firm, chose Greenville as its home. The site is now owned by DSM and employs approximately 1,200. The City and Pitt County have become home to many other major industries and businesses including Grady-White Boats, Attends Healthcare Products, NACCO Materials Handling Group, and ASMO. Vidant Health Systems serves a 29-county region, providing state-of-the-art healthcare choices.

Greenville has experienced tremendous growth since the turn of the century, with its population increasing from 60,476 in 2000 to the July 1, 2018 estimate of 93,137. The city is a major industrial and economic center for eastern North Carolina and home to the Eastern Office of the North Carolina Biotechnology Center.

For your interest, here are other sources of information about the history of Greenville: Greenville by Roger Kammerer and Candace Pearce, Greenville, Heart of the East by Mary Jo Jackson Bratton, and The Architectural Heritage of Greenville, North Carolina edited by Michael Cotter, history by Mary Hollis Barnes.

The City covers approximately 35 square miles and has a population of 93,137. The annual City operating budget is approximately $133 million. The property tax rate (ad valorem) is $.4945 per $100 assessed value.

CITY GOVERNANCE

Greenville has used the Council-Manager form of government since 1953. Under this form of government, the City Council, which is elected by the people, is the final authority on policy matters relating to Greenville's government. The City Council employs a City Manager to handle the day-to-day management and operations of the City.

MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL

The Mayor and City Council are the governing body of the City. The Mayor acts as the official head of the government and spokesperson for the Council. The Mayor presides at City Council meetings and signs documents authorized by the Council.

The Mayor Pro-Tem is selected by each newly-elected Council. This person assumes mayoral duties in the absence of the Mayor.

The Mayor and City Council are responsible for establishing general policies for the operation of the City as well as appointing the City Manager, City Attorney, City Clerk, and members of the volunteer Boards and Commissions. The Council enacts ordinances, resolutions, and orders; adopts the annual budget; approves the financing of all City operations; and authorizes contracts on behalf of the City.

CITY COUNCIL MEETINGS

The public is invited and encouraged to attend City Council meetings. Those meetings are held on the second Thursday of each month at 6:00 PM in the Council Chambers, located on the third floor of City Hall. The City Council also meets on the Monday before the second Thursday and the second Monday following the Thursday meeting at 6:00 PM. There is an opportunity for public comments during each meeting. Additionally, the City Council holds a workshop at 4:00 PM on the first Monday meeting date of the month. The workshop is held in City Hall Conference Room 337, 200 West Fifth Street. Due to conflicts, some meeting dates may vary. Meeting agendas are published on the City's website. They are also available from the City Clerk's Office.

ELECTIONS

Elections are held every other November (in odd years) for Mayor and six City Council Members. Elections are non-partisan. Candidates run for office under a system electing five district representatives, one at-large City Council Member, and the Mayor.
